300's Gift

A gift is defined as any item of value given to the University by a donor who expects nothing significant of value in return, other than recognition and disposition of the gift in accordance with the donor's wishes. In general, the following characteristics describe a gift:

1. No contractual requirements are imposed and there are no "deliverables" to the donor. However, the gift may be accompanied by a letter of understanding that outlines its intended use. For example, gifts may be provided to support a department, an individual faculty member's laboratory, or a construction project.
2. If used for the intended purpose, a gift is irrevocable. While the gift may be intended for use within a certain timeframe, there is no specified "period of performance" or "start/stop" date.
3. There is no formal fiscal accountability to the donor beyond periodic progress reports and summary reports of expenditures. These reports may be thought of as requirements of good stewardship, and, as such, may be required by the terms of a gift. They are not characterized as contractual obligations or "deliverables."
4. In circumstances where there are foundation grants to the University for specific expenditure support (excluding organized research activities) that will be executed within the same fiscal year period as the grant is intended, and in which the dollar amount is less than $100,000, the grant will be treated for accounting purposes as a gift. Stewardship of the grant will be assigned to the Office of Foundation Relations.

400's Endowment

The donor may specify that the income earned on an endowment be used for either general University purposes or for more restricted purposes (e.g. for the use of the Department of Chemical Engineering, or to provide financial aid to graduate students in the History Department). Income designated for general University purposes is used to help fund the operations supported by
